1. Write a shell script to print the name of the month if the month number is given (using 'case' construct).

2. Write a script and put the script in .profile, the script should run as soon as you log on to the system and it should print any one of the following message : "good morning" or "good afternoon" according to your system time.

3. Develop a shell script for adding two given numbers using functions construct. It should accept two numbers as command line arguments.

4. Write a script to create your own customized shell prompt. After executing the script the system shall end up with a prompt with your name and you should be able to execute your scripts with short commands.

5. Write a shell script to read two words and a filename from the command line and replace the occurences of first word with the second word in the given file.